Senior Play at Caldwell High School.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted "How the Vote Was Won," the laughable and well presented senior play of Caldwell High School. The entire cast was excellent and this, together with delightful music by the school orchestra, and reading by Miss Jessie Allman, "How Many Got the Vote," made an entertainment which sustains the reputation of this up-to-date school. The following is a synopsis of the story:

"Horace Cole, master in his own house, has a very poor opinion of Suffragettes and their arguments, but when all his female relatives come in, one at a time, and each with the announcement: 'I have come to be supported by you, Horace,' he suddenly realizes that he has never really opposed giving votes to women. He declares, in a spirit speech, that he will see that Parliament gives the women equal rights with men."

A fact also worthy of especial note, is that the furniture and stage settings were the work of the manual training classes of Caldwell High School.

Must Be Bluffing.

When the Road Commissioner and Fiscal Court opened the sealed bids for the construction of four miles of pike which is intended to connect the Otter Creek pike with the Booneboro pike, the bids were not the only thing that was opened. Their eyes flew open like tearing the blinder from a young mule. When they recovered their composure and got back on terra firma, they found that the bids ranged from $1,500.00 to $6,000.00 per mile. The matter was passed over until Tuesday so that the Commissioner could buy paraphernalia to swear on the prices and get in touch with them.

In the meantime the Commissioner will investigate and see if he cannot devise means whereby he can save the people from being "TOUCHED."

The Kentucky Conference.

The Epworth League will hold its annual assembly in Richmond June 21-24. About one hundred young people will come as delegates. Some of the best talent of the Methodist Church, South, will be on the program and an inspiring, helpful time is expected. Dr. E. H. Rawlings, of Nashville, Tenn., Educator Secretary Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, will be one of the speakers during the conference.

DEATHS

Mrs. Belle Grimes, age 62 years and wife of Wallace Grimes, died May 24th at the home of her niece, Mrs. M. M. Reids, near Becknerville after a protracted illness. She was buried at the Williams grave yard in Madison county near Reid house. She was a daughter of Bryant Seary.

The deep sympathy of their friends is tendered Mr. and Mrs. John B. Wright in the passing away of their little two year old son, John, on June 1st, after only a few days illness. Although everything possible was done for the dear one, the Master called and he held up to join the little children who make up His jewels in heaven. The life of this bright little darling was like a picture of early morning hour, when the dew-drop was sparkling on the flower, and marked the sunbeams o'er the play, then snatched it to the skies away, to be placed "safe in the arms of Jesus."

A Friend.

MARRIED

Friday, June 4, at the residence of Rev. A. J. Tribble, near this city, Miss Marion Dudley McKinney and Mr. Richard Holland were married. Miss McKinney is quite a pretty girl with a lovely manner. Mr. Holland is one of the oldest families of the county and is an energetic and progressive young man.

Miss Virginia Potts and H. T. Guthrie, of Mexico, Mo., were married last Wednesday night by the Rev. J. A. Trostle. An elegant dinner was served after which the young couple left on the 11:30 p.m. train for Croker, Mo., where they will engage in missionary work. We wish them much happiness and prosperity in their new field.

Miss Julia Cain and Mr. Ulysses Kay joined hearts and fortunes last Saturday when the Rev. A. J. Tribble said the mystic words that made them man and wife. Both are of this country from the Waco vicinity.

Thursday morning Mr. Collins Coy and Miss Anna Turnor mortified to the home of G. C. Stocker and were quietly married in the presence of a few friends. Miss Turnor is a most estimable lady, and has been matron of the deaf mute Institute at Danville, for sometime where her efforts were highly commendable.

Mr. Coy is one of the county's best known and prosperous men.

Mr. and Mrs. Coy will visit the summer resorts and travel in the west during the summer. Their many friends extend congratulations.

SHACKELFORD
Shells The Woods at Winchester.

Promptly at the appointed hour on Saturday, Judge Shackelford mounted the rostrum at Winchester to answer the recent speech of his opponent, Judge J. M. Benton, made at that place. He was introduced by Squire Conkright. The house was crowded to suffocation and round after round of applause greeted the speaker as he appeared on the rostrum. For over two hours he held the audience and delivered sledge hammer blows at his antagonist. Judge Shackelford said in part:

"This is the first time in my life I ever undertook to make a speech myself and I am somewhat embarrassed as to how to proceed.

"I was born, raised and have lived all of my life in Richmond. I was educated at Central University, taking the Bachelor of Arts degree from that institution in 1887 at the age of 17 years. Taking a post-graduate course, I received the degree of Master of Arts the next year. From that day to this I have made my own way. I taught school for two years, one of which was in the university and studied law, taking a short course in 1890 at the University of Virginia, under the celebrated John B. Minor. I was admitted to the bar in January, 1891, and have practiced my profession in the courts of Madison county continuously up to the time I was elected County Judge.

"My honored opponent in a message to the people of Clark county, which he delivered here May 24, was disposed to speak with much contempt of my activities as a practitioner. I am sorry my methods have not won his approval. I never heard any complaint from Judge Morton or Judge Scott, but from never had the inexcusable effort to declare myself a candidate for Circuit Judge while those gentlemen were on the bench.

How He Practiced Law.
"I say frankly that I did not practice law to suit our present Circuit Judge, but to please and care for the business of my clients. I always felt that my services were worth more to my clients to keep them out of trouble than to get them out of trouble. A large part of my practice was office practice and never criminal practice if I could help it.

Villa Would Talk Peace to Carranza

"The County Judge of Madison county since January, 1910, and I believe the people of that county will attest that I have given them good service, anyhow than renominated me by 911 majority over one of our best and most popular citizens and my personal friend, who never once during the whole campaign bit me or himself either, for that matter.

"The first thing I did was to eliminate politics from the fiscal affairs of the county and during my administration the County Judge's office has been a business office and not a political machine. As a result, about $95,000.00 of Madison county debts have been paid and the tax rate reduced 3 cents on the $100.00.

Pledges Himself to Be Judge.

"The County Judge of Madison county don't know whether a man is big or little, rich or poor, black or white, Democrat or Republican, and I give you my solemn assurance that if you elect me your Circuit Judge, I will be your Circuit Judge.

"I know, from the experience I have had at the bar and on the bench, that I am qualified to discharge the duties of this office, notwithstanding my honorable opponent told you that I was an incompetent ignoramus. I am not such an ignoramus as to believe or say that I am the only man in the district who is competent to preside over your Circuit Court and I don't believe that Judge Scott believed it or said it, although Judge Benton stated that Judge Scott willed him this office and five machine politicians in Frankfort unanimously agreed that he was the only man who had done enough for their crowd to receive the appointment. There will be no strings tied to me for politicians or corporations or personal friends or good clever bootleggers, who always have some river fish in the skillet, to pull.

"I will be your Circuit Judge, and NOBODY ELSE! I will have no partners or pets, nor deputies. I will owe no debts which have to be paid from the bench. There is not now nor ever will anybody I am afraid of, and no obligations which cannot be discharged in my personal capacity.

"I will be your Circuit Judge, and NOBODY ELSE! I will have no partners or pets, nor deputies. I will owe no debts which have to be paid from the bench. There is not now nor ever will anybody I am afraid of, and no obligations which cannot be discharged in my personal capacity.

TAKE A STAND

There should be no doubt where a paper stands on any important political, social or commercial question and for this reason we have not hesitated to state our position on the questions as they arise. On the liquor question, whether the people at large may view it as social or political, we stand;

First: For National Prohibition.

Second: For State Prohibition.

Third: For Local Option with the units in the following order (a) Districts (b) Counties (c) Precincts.

National prohibition can be secured by the passage of laws repealing the liquor license laws and providing penalties for the manufacture or sale of liquor.

State prohibition can be secured by the passage of laws repealing the liquor license laws and providing penalties for the manufacture or sale of liquor.

On the question of local option, the constitution guarantees "To Districts" the right to vote on the question. There are no words limiting the right to magisterial district but the word is used in its fullest and most comprehensive sense and embraces any territorial division of both state and county.

There is much discussion of the question of an amendment to the constitution to allow the people to vote on the question for the entire state. No such amendment is necessary. The constitution leaves to the legislature the right to repeal all license laws. Local option was intended to permit the people of a territory less than the whole state to have the privilege of voting on questions as to whether or not the license laws should be suspended in the territory voting thereon. It was never intended to give such territory the right to determine whether or not liquor should be sold therein contrary to the will of the state. The whole question of regulating the sale of liquor for the entire state was left to the legislature.

It can constitutionally repeal all liquor license laws and provide laws prohibiting the sale of liquor.

In this view of the question, it is important that the candidates declare for what they stand. One who is unwilling to do so can be counted on as a milksop who has no opinion on any question and who can not be depended upon in case of emergency. Make the candidates speak out in meetings and say for what they stand.

NOT LOCAL OPTION COUNTY.

We beg to again call the attention of the public for the tenth time that this county is not a local option county and that the officials are handicapped in the enforcement of the liquor laws for this reason. Will we make it a local option county? All that is necessary is a vote on the question for the whole county. The sentiment is overwhelmingly for local option. Read on page 5 "What Liquor Money Would Do."

NOT EXACTLY.

"The Climax is trying to get the Richmond barbers to prohibit smoking in their places of business. Might as well start a crusade with the hope of success against the barber telling you all he knows and then some while he is working on your face. The barber shop is considered a sort of easy, go-as-you-please place, and the Climax is going to have a hard time making a Sunday School out of it."—Interior Journal

Nope. Not trying to make Sunday Schools of the shops. Have good Sunday Schools here. Only trying to benefit the tired, worn barbers who are compelled to labor all day in a fog of cigarette smoke and listen all day to a stream of profanity and vulgarity. Just a trying to benefit the patrons of the shops who would like to get a shave, hair cut or oil on the "bar" in a perfectly sanitary shop where ladies can go with their children when necessary, without having to inhale an atmosphere fouled with a double extract of cigarette smoke. Otherwise our shops are first class and manned by excellent, gentlemanly barbers. You can't beat them anywhere.

HOT WEATHER COMING.

With Benton and Shackelford scouring the county, each proclaiming the unfitness of the other, with Judge Stout and Collector Ben Marshall in adjoining district pulling hair, peeling skin and throwing on salt and with many smaller fry and bigger game engaged in the same pastime, the political thermometer has run up several notches and bids fair to break the glass. And 'tis only June when old sol should be casting his most serene and beneficial rays on a smiling world. But won't August be a hot old time!

BUSINESS GOOD

Dun's Review gives out an optimistic report that is highly encouraging. The banks have plenty of money, our balance of trade is large, collections are better, failures are fewer, crops bid fair to be the largest and best for years. Big Business is on the boom and on the whole, things have loosened up and business in general is getting a bump on itself.

SWEEP YOUR PAVEMENTS

There is an ordinance in force in this city that requires tenants and property owners to sweep their sidewalks and keep their gutters in clean and sanitary condition. A fine of ten dollars is the penalty for failure to do so. Is this to be a dead letterstatute? Looks like it. The street commissioner is requested to open his eyes and report all delinquents.

PROGRESSIVE.

The City Dads have ordered Main street from Joe's Corner to McKee's corner paved with brick. The property owners, so far as we are advised were willing to do this. This speaks well for progress. Now let the White way follow.

MILITARY SCHOOL

Lets have a military school. The training for young men is excellent. Did it ever occur to you that the boys of the present age are trained a la Sal?

GET IN THE SWIM

Nicholasville is to have a new white way. Why not Richmond? Why not keep up with the procession? Just as well be up-to-date. It does not cost any more so they tell us.

The Hampton Controversy.

"It is absolutely necessary that any court, in order to maintain its efficiency and dignity, shall require strict compliance with its rules, and whenever any person by the violation of these rules puts himself in contempt of his court, he may expect to be punished for contempt and continue to be punished until he purges himself of the contempt."

"I differ from Judge Benton as to the proper time he should have handed in his resignation. I say to you had I been Judge of the Circuit Court when this occurred, Mr. Hampton would be in jail to day before I would have permitted him to dictate terms to the court over which I preside upon which he was willing to come out of jail. Before I would have accepted Mr. Hampton's terms I would have telegraphed my resignation to the Governor and permitted him to appoint some other Judge whose business it would be to arrange this matter with Mr. Hampton, but I seriously doubt if the Governor of this Commonwealth could have found a Judge upon the Circuit bench who would have been willing to compromise the honor and dignity of his court by accepting the terms which

Mr. Hampton imposed.

"If I recollect correctly, Mr. Hampton stated in substance: 'I will with their consent, give the names of two men only to whom I have given money to be used in the election.' They are to be indicted and plead guilty. The court is to place a fine of $50 on each of them which I will pay. I will also pay the contempt fines already assessed against me. I am to be discharged of contempt and all investigation and prosecution as to bribery here, inasmuch that although he was reliably informed that money was used in the Winchester city primary of this year, that it was not a violation of the law to buy votes in a city primary, as it was not held under the statute.

Section 1550 Kentucky Statutes reads:

"Hereafter all candidates for elective offices to be voted for at any general election shall be nominated by a primary election held in accordance with the provisions of this act, except school trustees, etc." My friends is Winchester the home of the pioneer in the fight for clean elections, the place where this fight has been won single handed and alone by that valorous pioneer, to be the only place in Kentucky it has come to pass that it is not against the law to buy votes?

"Judge Benton stated in his message:

"Judge Shackelford and I have already subscribed and sworn to this oath: I will not knowingly violate any election law or any law defining or relating to corrupt and fraudulent practice in campaigns or elections in this State." That statement is a part of the declaration which every candidate is required to sign before he can get his name on the ballot. Some people seem to have gotten into the idea that it was a private agreement between me and Judge Benton. I have made no agreement of any kind with Judge Benton. I don't have to be involved in any agreement not to violate the law."

Judge Shackelford was accompanied to Winchester by numerous friends from here and they all say that the Judge made a fine impression and many votes were forced upon him by his forceful speech.

"It is true that Judge Benton has reduced the expenses of the Circuit

Court in this district to such an enormous extent since he has been in office, it might be true that with another new man on the bench, those expenses might be still further reduced. The ex-

NORMAL NOTESCommencement Eastern Kentucky State Normal

(By Maude Gibson)

Beautiful! yes, beautiful! was the commencement sermon on the Campus Sunday evening. Of course it was spiritual and helpful to the young people who go forth from us this week as well as to the crowd of friends of the Normal who had gathered to worship with them.

But the service under the maples in the twilight, Reverend Reynolds presiding, and with exquisite choruses under the direction of Professor Koch, sung by Mary Patti Music Club, the earnest in vocation by Reverend B. C. Horton and Dr. Telford's wonderful sermon harmonized, seemed to be a blending of the highest notes of the spiritual, the artistic and the dramatic. It was a fitting beginning of a splendid week which is before us. A season of good things in an intellectual way must surely appeal to the Richmond people who are cordially invited to attend.

The only feature not absolutely free to everyone are the High School Reception on Monday night, the Alumni Banquet, admittance to which is only by card and the President's Promenade Reception on Thursday night where children will kindly not be in attendance.

A new feature this year will be the Academic Procession on Friday morning. The faculty members will wear Oxford caps and gowns with proper colors representing the department from which they have taken their respective degrees in the different State Normals, Colleges and Universities throughout the United States. While this is an innovation at Eastern it is commonly practiced in the up-to-date Normal Schools elsewhere and lends much to the dignity and interest of the proceedings of the morning.

The best talent available was secured for the two commencement addresses and President Crabb is to be congratulated on his success in arranging a program containing two of the most popular public speakers in the state at this time.

(The schedule for the week was printed in full in the last issue of this paper.)

In Society

A lovely affair of Saturday afternoon was the tea given by Mrs. Alex Denny, in honor of the bride-elect, Miss Marion Logan Kean.

The pretty home on Rock Ave. was tastefully decorated with daises and ferns, the dining room being especially attractive. Here coffee and sandwiches were served. Mrs. Hale Dean presided at the coffee urn.

On the side veranda a table covered with flowers bore the punch bowl where Miss Jane D. Stockton did the honors.

The hours were from five to six during which time a large number of guests called.

Quite a delightful storm party was given Miss Elizabeth Salée at her attractive new home on Rock Ave. Thursday evening. About thirty friends called and with dancing and merrymaking the hours passed all too swiftly.

Miss Jane D. Stockton entertained the Young Ladies Bridge on Tuesday afternoon. The guest of honor was her charming visitor.

Miss Sue Chenault entertained a number of young friends with a "cave party" on Monday.

Mrs. E. B. Weisenburg was hostess of the last meeting of the Bridge Club on Friday afternoon at Westover Terrace. The games were succeeded by a lovely lunch and the trophy was awarded the hostess.

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE"

To Be Presented at Our Forthcoming Chautauqua---Exclusive Producing Rights For Chautauqua and Lyceum For the United States and Canada Held by the Redpath Bureau

WILLIAM OWEN AS "ROBERT"

"MY LITTLE KID! MY LITTLE KID!"

"OH! DON'T CRY!"

"MANSON" PHOTOS BY MATSCHER

William Owen Heads Company of Artists Producing William Rann Kennedy's Great Play

THIE introduction by the Redpath Chautauqua for this season of a modern play will set a new precedent throughout the Chautauqua world. Heretofore all such productions under Redpath management have been limited to the literature of Shakespeare and Goldsmith.

The play to be produced is "The Servant in the House," written by Charles Rann Kennedy. William Owen will head the company of artists, and the author, Mr. Kennedy, will assist Mr. Owen in the coaching of the cast prior to its tour upon the Chautauqua circuit. The Redpath by paying a large royalty holds exclusive right for the Chautauqua production of this play in both the United States and Canada. "The Servant in the House" contains a story that goes to the fundamentals and so touches the common heart. It depicts the love of a father for his child, carrying that love through his poverty, degradation and bitterness. The child, when too young to realize her father's condition, has been placed in comfortable circumstances, but her heart still cries for her father as her father's cries for her. How that love like a magnet draws them together like a beautiful tale in the play. A song of praise through the play moves the figure of Manson, the embodiment of the ideal, the vision of love and truth toward which the world, in spite of wars, sorrows and poverty, is slowly moving.

William Owen, who heads the company of artists who are to present "The Servant in the House" on the Lyceum platform the coming season under Redpath management, was for twelve years at the head of his own company. He has selected the players for this cast from among actors of experience who he has known for years. Mr. Owen is also known in educational circles. He has addressed a very large per cent of all the colleges, high schools and women's clubs in the middle west.

Beginning his career at the early age of eighteen years, at twenty-three he was playing Mephistopheles for Lewis Morrison in "Faust." He took Mr. Morrison's part in this play for six months. Since he was twenty-two he has appeared in nothing but leading roles. In Shakespearean productions he has appeared as Hamlet, Romeo, Shylock, Benedick, Inigo and Orlando, in "The Three Musketeers" as D'Artagnan, in the famous dramas of Bulwer-Lytton and Bulwer. Mr. Melnotte. He has played the part of David Garrick in "David Garrick" and Ingomar in "Ingomar." For two weeks he has played a leading role with Julia Marlowe in McVicker's Theater, Chicago, and in the original run of "Jo-sephine, Empress of the French." He appeared with Ithea, the great French actress, in the Broadway Theater, New York. With Donald Robertson he appeared in the Art Institute, Chicago, in the plays of Ibsen, Browning, Milton, Goethe and others, and it was while here in October, 1908, that James O'Bryan Bennett, the noted dramatist of Cincinnati, wrote in the Herald "His ideals are high, his soul is selfish and his equipment solid. He is a tower of strength to any organization because he has the craftsmanship of his calling at his fingers' ends. . . . His method is simple and vigorous and he has authority both in speech and demeanor."

Gown Faintly Reminiscent of the Spanish Dancing Girl

In the making of fashions we have found it necessary to call upon almost every country of the world.

In the gown shown here Spain has furnished us with the motif. The tiny bolero is reminiscent of the Spanish dancing girl, and you might fancy that Carmen had come out of the opera to pose for it.

The gown is developed of black sequins and jet, made over according plaited chiffon and a slip of black satin. To give the color note which every gown should possess—two carmine garments are used—one at the hem of the tulle, and the other is posed at the back of the bodice. It is only moderately decollete, and the sleeves are wisps of chiffon, daintily showing the bare arm of the wearer.

Many skirts, especially those of chiffon or silk, are bound with bias bands, usually self material, with the addition of marquisette, chiffon, tulle and lace, which are bound with silk.

Box plaids are held in place by narrow folds of silk.

Scalloped edged skirts, and there are many, are bound with narrow folds of the same material.

Full, double plaited ruffles have their edges plucked and add a quaint old-fashioned air to taffeta and tulle gowns.

For a woman who always chooses a black parasol there is a model called "chapeau," for the reason that it resembles a sombrero. It is fashioned of black taffeta, but around the outer edge is a band of black velvet about three inches in width. The ribs turn up in manner that gives the whole thing a very unique effect.

A very smart afternoon gown has a practical note that should appeal to it.

QUESTION CLEARED UP.

Richmond People Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

Again and again we have read of strangers in distant towns who have been cured by this or that medicine. But Richmond's pertinent question has always been "Has anyone here in Richmond been cured?" The word of a stranger living a hundred miles away may be true, but it cannot have the same weight with us as the word of our own citizens, whom we know and respect, and whose evidence we can easily prove.

Mrs. H. Todd, 128 Big Hill Ave., Richmond, says: "I feel run down and in need of a kidney medicine. Joan's Kidney Pills procured at Middleton's Drug Store, made me feel better and stronger in every way."

"I am 50, at the waters. Don't simply ask for kidney remedy," said Mrs. Todd.

Swagger Gown Built of Two Fabrics With Picturesque Details

These are high boots of black and white, with white silk hose, because in the swirl and swirl of the skirt a dainty bit of boudoir may be exposed, and to be strictly in the picture the hose must match at least the shoe tops. The dashing sailor would have as his only garniture a flat band of pink and white silk, of which the waistcoat and muffler are made. Under the coat will be worn a soft blouse either of dainty or some of the wash silks.

For those who like the fond of the checked suitings that are so smart for morning and general utility street wear there is a new variety of this design. Woolen suitings, checked, are showing shawl-like borders of the darker color in the check, these borders sometimes being five inches wide. The new checked material is cleverly made in really stunning models, a sash tunic frequently ornamenting the skirt, the point sloping to the hem at the center front.

Colored gloves are "in" again, in accordance with their annual spurt into fashion. While brilliant colors in gloves are not new, it seems very probable that they will be more generally accepted this year because of the extravagance in footwear. One usually associates gloves and shoes together. There are never compromises for the less daring woman who dislikes to clothe her dainty hands in bright blue, green and red kid. White gloves are very heavily stitched with these same shades, holding them on the back, giving a most attractive, smart appearance without belting at all black.

Perhaps the prettiest turn of the new fashion is the repetition in the kids of the lovely new shades of grays, tans and putty colors. They are unusually attractive in themselves in the soft, pliable leather from which the new gloves are made. ANNA MAY.

Prohibition Convention

Jessamine Man Nominated For Governor

The prohibition party of Kentucky met in convention at Louisville Friday and nominated the following State ticket:

Governor—Andrew Johnson, Wilmore
Lieutenant Governor—T. B. Demaree, Wilmore.

Secretary of State—Frances E. Beaumont, Lexington.

State Treasurer—Adam Carpenter, Morehead.

Auditor—M. L. Moore, Franklin.
Andrew Johnson is an evangelist, residing at Wilmore, and of considerable prominence in the religious world. Col. Demaree is known to our people as stalwart temperance worker, and a good stump speaker. Mrs. Beaumont is the first woman to run for a state office in Kentucky, and is the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the State.—Jessamine News.

Only A Few Can Go.

Those who are so fortunate that expense does not have to be considered are now going to health resorts to get rid of the impurities of the system that cause rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles. If you are one of those who cannot go, yet feel that you need relief from such pain and misery, try Foley Kidney Pills. They restore the kidneys to healthful activity and make you well and strong. The Eames Recital

A good sized audience attended the Lecture recital given by Henry Eames of Chicago, and incidentally heard the most beautiful instrument in this section, the new Chickering Concert Grand piano. It was the general judgment that Mr. Eames as an interpreter of music has few peers. The lecture part of his program was instructive and enlightening, as well as entertaining, but it was his playing which most captivated his audience. His phrasing was intelligent and masterful, technic faultless. He had remarkable control and an ease of playing which was refreshing to his hearers. Unlike many of the great pianists he was entirely free from eccentric mannerisms but played with dignity even in his most florid passages. His pedal effects were truly surprising, especially in the diminuendo passages of the Chopin Funeral March and the Beethoven Sonata in C Sharp Minor. Several persons in the audience commented on the similarity of his playing with that of Paderewski. It is quite evident that Mr. Eames understands the moods and tone-thoughts of the masters, for his playing is peculiarly spiritual and soulful.

The Chickering concert grand responded to his playing in a wonderful way. Its tone was always pure and sweet, and even when its tremendous power was brought out by the performer there was an undisturbed clarity of tone.

Throughout, its registers were there an evenness and unity of timbre.

In most pianos there is a comparativewoodlessness in the upper register, but this Chickering is remarkably resonant throughout, and excels in its singing quality.

The beautiful symmetry of construction of the case was restful to the eye.

It is built along several classical lines and richly finished in very dark mahogany.

Richmond may well be proud to be the possessor of this wonderfully beautiful instrument.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XI.—Second Quarter, For June 13, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ps. xxxii—Memory Verse, 5—Golden Text, Ps. xxxii, 1. Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is certainly restful and most refreshing to turn from the record of sin, as in the last lesson, to this record of sin forgiven and to hear the Spirit of the Lord through David tell of this great blessedness. Nathan said to David, "The Lord bath put away thy sin; by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme" (1 Sam. xii, 13, 14), and they have been blaspheming ever since. There is forgiveness for the sinner, but it is an awful thing to be a stumbling block in the way of others. It is beautiful to read of such a sinner as David as the apostle of the God of Jacob and the psalmist of Israel. The title, "God is my most wonderful name" gives me great encouragement.

As to the psalm of David, see how he gives God all the glory. "The Spirit of the Lord spoke by me, and His word was in my tongue" (11 Sam. xxiii, 1, 2). There can be no doubt that the Lord wrote through him all the psalms attributed to him and many of the others. Our Lord Jesus spoke of him as writing the One Hundred and Tenth (Matt. xxii, 41-43). The apostles spoke of him as the author of the Sixteenth, the Second and others (Acts 9, 30, 31; 14, 20; 20, 30, 32-37). Paul often quotes our Lord's lesson as coming through David.

In Rom. iv, 5-8, this is the second psalm beginning with the word "blessed," and it is a plural word meaning literally "Oh, the blessings!" Spurgeon says that it means double joys, bundles of happiness, mountains of delight. There can be no real blessedness till we know our sins forgiven, and the gospel that does not proclaim the forgiveness of sins is not the gospel of God, for that gospel says, "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, and by Him all that believe are justified from all things" (Acts xiii, 38; Rom. iii, 24).

There are four different ways used concerning our guilt—forgiving, covering, not implying. All are fully accomplished for us by the one great act of Calvary. The first means become ours when we confess our sins to the Lord. The second means come when we turn to Him. We may actually have the forgiveness and be without the joy because we do not rest on the assurance of His infinite word, for joy and peace come only by believing (Rom. x, 13). If we do not acknowledge our sin and seek to cover our iniquity we will be as bad as case was David (verses 3-5), but if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. And when we have done this we may wander and need restoration (verse 6; 11, 12; John x, 28).

How rich is verse 7, my hiding place, our life hid with Christ in God and in Christ! (Col. i, 22; Eph. i, 11; II Cor. xii, 2.) My strong habitation, dwelling place (Ps. lxx, 2; xc, 1) is absolutely safe, preserved from trouble, for though we must have tribulation, we need not be troubled, and no real evil can befall us (John xvi, 33; xiv, 1). He may let us go to the furnace or the lions' den, but we shall come

These are high boots of black and white, with white silk hose, because in the swirl and swirl of the skirt a dainty bit of hose may be exposed, and to be strictly in the picture the hose must match at least the shoe tops. The dashing sailor would have it. It is a very flat band of pink and white silk, of which the waistcoat and muffler are made. Under the coat will be worn a soft blouse either of dimity or some of the wash silks.

For those who are fond of the checked suitings that are so smart for morning and general utility street wear there is a new variety of this design. Woolen suitings, checked, are showing shawl-like borders of the darker color in the check, these borders sometimes being five inches wide. The new checked material is cleverly made into really stunning models, a shawl tunic frequently ornamenting the skirt, the point dipping to the hem at the center front.

"Are You an Architect?"

He spread upon the table in front of Conrad.

"There," he said; "see what you can do toward designing an outside for that house; just a rough, free-hand sketch."

In spite of the draftman's apparent deliberateness, they had not long to wait; for presently he put pencil to the block of paper and, with deft, sure strokes, not one mark wasted, sketched, in perfect perspective, a house fitting the plans that he had seen; its roof simple to avoid snow-pockets, its eaves and porches wide to afford shade in summer, its lines simple and squat for the flat grounds. The ornamentation, massed against broad plain surfaces, was exquisite in its suggested detail and placed with consummate art. Meade, as the last strokes were put down, could scarcely wait.

"Look at that!" he exclaimed in triumph to his friends. "Harper couldn't make a drawing like that in two years!"

As young Conrad added a chimney and lined in the wide porch-steps, Meade was for jerking the sketch from under his fingers, but the artist held up his right hand solemnly.

"You shout 'wait,'" he calmly commanded, and, with few deft lines, suggested a seaweed lawn, some trees and shrubs, then, having drawn a wavy line about it to circumscribe the plane of his picture, he detached the sheet from the block and handed it over, with the pencil upon it.

The three bent over it in profound respect.

"That is certainly some house," pronounced Hyde.

"I don't know how to say lovely," drawled Eastman, "but I'm willing to pronounce that, a mighty decent design."

"Decent?" repeated Meade. "It's great!"

II.

Of course they called him "the Dutchman" after he had become an intimate part of the life of Holden, for there was almost no foreign element in the town. Eight dollars a week and his board Harper paid Conrad, and the boy was satisfied.

"I am more worth," he said, adding philosophically, "but it is not here the money. If you have not profit of my work that I do, then I am—what you call—it no goot."

Harper, with whom economy was a stern necessity, brought a cot into the office, and for a week Conrad slept upon this cot, taking his meals at a nearby restaurant. During that week Harper studied his draftsman closely, and Mrs. Hyde made two unobtrusive trips to the office for the same purpose. On Sunday Conrad was taken to the Harper home and formally installed.

"He's simple a revelation, Sam," Mrs. Harper pronounced in surprise after the first week. "After you get used to the dialect you begin to discover that he's well educated; he's artistic to his finger-tips, a poet in feeling, a lover of severely good music; he sings divinely, and little Elsie fairly loves him. She makes him rock her to sleep every noon before he goes back to work."

It was the good-fellowship of this couple, together with their growing affection, which made Conrad turn his admiration of them to the same degree of worship that he had already bestowed upon four-year-old Elsie. His lines were cast in pleasant places indeed, and he thrust his roots deeply into the soil.

At first he had to overcome the same contemptuous prejudice that had bestowed upon him the title of "the Dutchman." Mrs. Harper introduced him to some nice girls, but secretly they laughed at his broken English; and Blanche Reynolds, by whom he was at once speechlessly smitten, openly flouted him; whereas Mrs. Harper tried to shake her. With the young men he was, though somewhat less constraint, though even he was still an alien until one evening when, in passing the library, one of a group of young men made some laugher remark, loud enough to be overheard, the "Dutchman."

Conrad wheeled immediately and came back to the direction he had been marching, and hurried along the half-way of an old, rickety, name-hauling. Up one flight of stairs he stalked into an office where, near the window, a big rough table, littered with paper and drawing materials, was tilted upon rude trestles. A cheerful wood fire was burning in an old-fashioned stove; but there was no one in the room, and Meade plunged into the next office through the communicating door, which was open.

This was a lawyer's office. If one might judge from the yellow-backed books which filled three cases, and here sat two men with their feet on opposite sides of a flat-top desk, chattering lazily.

"Where's Harper?" Meade briskly demanded.

"He's out of town, Brandy," drawled the lean-faced man at the far side of the desk. "Harper's gone to mortgage his immortal soul for another new machine, and I'm keeping up his fire so this room won't be so beastly cold when he opens our door tomorrow morning."

"Harper's an ass; tell him I said so!" Meade retorted, and turned back into the architect's office.

He found Conrad, his hands clasped behind him, inspecting the materials upon the table with greedy eyes.

"Keep your collar on, Dutchy," he admonished with amused tolerance.

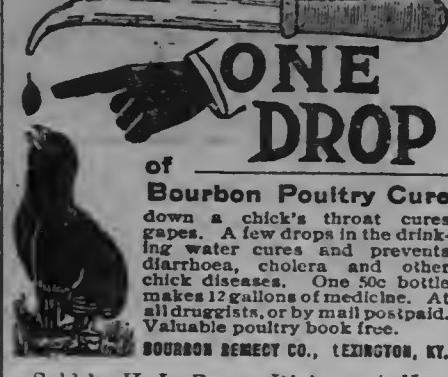

"I am not Dutchman, I have said!" insisted Conrad, "chinch you!"

They moved to Hyde's barn. Harper's steeds in Holden had been swift, unexpected, spontaneous strides, and they had been fought out with great vigor in an entirely impromptu manner; but this was a decided novelty, at which even the sworn officers of the peace winked complacently. When the he started toward the door. "Goot-by," he said brokenly.

Harper was ash-white under the accusation that he could not resent.

"Where are you going?" he stammered.

"I do not know. A way like I came," answered Conrad. "I forgot you," and he was gone.

Harper was still sitting rigidly upon the stool when Meade came hustling in five minutes later.

"Got a job for you, Sam," he said. "I've made Parsons consent to tear down the rickety old buildings on his corner and put up a good business block. Say, what's the matter with you, anyhow?"

Harper had not moved. He had been gazing at Meade with fixed eyes, like one in a horror-stricken trance; but now he drew from his pocket the check that Meade had given him but an hour before and proffered it.

"I failed it," he numbly confessed.

"I failed the time."

"Oh, climb down from your perch!" Meade whirled out with no abatement whatever of his crisp manner. "Now, what's all this about? Tell me like a man."

"You say you falsified those time entries," he went on. "I glanced them over while you were at my office. They were all in Conrad's writing."

"Gad!" exclaimed Harper. "For the moment I had forgotten him. I read off those items to him from the book last night, changing them as I went along. He found out this morning what I had done and he called me a thief and left. God knows what it cost him. There's a girl here—that was his girl here—that failed, after he went away I had to renege."

"Away," yelled Meade. "What do you mean by 'away'?" Not that he's going to leave Holden?"

"Just that," affirmed Harper. "He said he couldn't look my wife and me in the face and tell on me, and couldn't look you in the face and not tell."

"Put away your books! We've got to stop Conrad. We've got to overtake that Dutchman, I tell you!"

IV.

When they were through, after the third cold house of all, Harper counted up the new record. As revised, the book showed over a thousand dollars still due him from Meade—enough to tide him over this desperate pinch in which he found himself. Musling in pallid-faced self-loathing over this, his first departure from rectitude, he did a tiring inexplicable even in one of his careless habits. He destroyed the old book, abstractedly tearing it page by page and dropping it in the wastebasket.

In the morning came Conrad, and recognized the scraps at once. On the table lay the new book where Harper had left it the night before. It mechanically obeyed the inexorable logic of the situation, Conrad picked some of the scraps from the basket and compared entries. Every legible word was damning. Here, on the 16th, was Turner, on the old book three hours, in the new book nine hours. Wright was in the new book for nine hours, on that date, and in the old one his name was not written down at all, for he had been at work on another job.

Then Harper came in, strangely shaken, though trying to preserve an air of easy nonchalance.

"I have just had a settlement with Meade," he began in a voice intended to be brusque. "And what do you think the fellow did? Offered me a five-hundred-dollar bonus for the good work we have done!"

"Here's your back pay, Conrad," he said. "I'm sorry to have kept you waiting so long."

Conrad backed away from the check as if it were an unclean thing.

"No, no, no, cried. That money, I want it not! It is not good for me."

He saw in the basket this morning the book where you tore it up. You had been a thief; I am part thief;" and slipping his instruments into his pockets

He is gone," he faltered. "He left about half an hour ago."

"I got such a curious note from him," she explained. "He met my brother on the street and gave it to him. Why did he go?"

"It was a—a point of honor," Harper lamely told her.

He was spindled to see the way the girl squared her shoulders, and how her eyes flashed, though she grew paler still.

"He has done nothing wrong," she declared. "I know it!"

"Bless your heart, no!" exploded Meade. "He couldn't if he tried."

"Meade, don't you worry about Conrad, because his friends are not going to let him get away," and he burst outside with his usual sputtering guilt.

"Sure enough, it is there," exclaimed the cigarmaker, rushing to recover his property. "How did you know that?"

"In my business, which happens to be that of a professional detective," exclaimed the customer. "I find that a knowledge of the human inclination to do many trifling things unconsciously is of value. In the present case force of habit caused your last customer to throw away the cigar lighter after using it precisely as if it were a match. He did it without thinking. He drew the rod either to the right or left, after lighting his cigar, according to the hand he used."

"Now, the rod was not on the floor to his left, for I looked carefully when you spoke. Consequently it had to be on the pavement, as the cigar lighter stands just next to the open door."

"Here is my card. If ever you need a detective let me know."

"Easy question to answer," smiled the customer. "What little rod is out there on the pavement just outside the door. I have not seen it, but I know it is there."

THE NAVY MENU; PREPARED AND

HOW PURCHASED, FINALLY SERVED

By W. R. RYAN
F "the Little Corporal" had been an admiral instead of the world's most famous general he would have probably applied the following fundamental truth to the soldiers of the sea when he said that "an army travels on its belly," for, whether on land or sea, bodily fuel is indispensable.

If you have ever had the good fortune to witness a company of Uncle Sam's sailors on parade you have undoubtedly felt a wave of admiration and pride surge over you at the sight of so magnificent a body of men, exhibiting health and strength in every line. And you have perhaps wondered the causes that combine to produce such stalwart specimens of mankind. For in proportion to the world there is a finer, stronger, healthier body of men than those who man the fighting ships of the United States navy.

One of the most important factors contributing to achieve this physical perfection in the naval personnel is the food—the "ration," as the three meals a day are termed. It is upon the foundation of food hygiene that the other health giving factors in our man-o'-war's men's daily routine find a perfect base on which to build.

The ration components are fixed by law, which specifically states what quantities of food and how much shall be served to the enlisted personnel daily. Thus the task is set to procure the different items of food and see that they are prepared in a manner calculated to make them most attractive and nutritious.

Marketing for the navy has been evolved into a most elaborate and scientific system, and when it is considered that the navy market basket must provide for over 50,000 men every day it is apparent that the task is no small one. Like the wise, discriminating housewife, the government demands and gets always the best in quality and purity in every article of food that is purchased for the men. Take for example, from among the innumerable items comprising the ration, the principal item, meat. This one item is purchased in great quantities, from 500,000 to 1,000,000 pounds being not infrequently purchased at one time. This meat, including several kinds, such as beef, pork, veal, fowl, etc., is purchased after advertising for bids which must be based on carefully prepared specifications that will admit of only the best products the markets of the world can furnish.

The contract has been consummated and deliveries commence, expert inspectors are detailed to see that the smallest detail of the specifications as to quality, purity, etc., is rigidly complied with, and not one pound is accepted until these government experts have assured themselves of entire compliance in every respect with the letter of the specifications and contract.

The same elaborate system of specifications and inspections which governs the purchase and delivery of this meat is just as assiduous and scientific in applying to every other individual component of the ration, including butter, eggs and spuds (Irish potatoes) down to canned tomatoes.

The meals above described were actually served on board the United States battleship Wyoming and represent in quality and variety the average daily ration aboard ship. One could scarcely wish to partake of more tempting or wholesome repasts.

The food is not served to the men in individual portions, but each table, accomodating from ten to fifteen men, has its own supply in several his-fresh provisions on board. The chief of the deck gives out there is a supply ship standing by with a ready cargo of all kinds of fresh products—fresh eggs, meats, vegetables, etc.—to replenish every ship that needs them.

So well developed is the navy's system of food supply that on the memorable trip of the Atlantic fleet of six battleships around the world in 1908 ample supplies of fresh provisions for all hands were always provided. From this it will be seen that whatever is thus it is seen that Uncle Sam administers wisely and with generosity and this phase of the sailor's life. No matter how well his home trade was maintained, the bluejacket is well content and satisfied with his three square meals a day in the navy, and if you ask him how he likes the navy cuisine he will invariably answer "Bully!"

SONG.
COME, let me go to the land where the wild things are Let's go thither, hand in hand, Over the waters, over the snow, To the land where the sweet, sweet wio lets blow!

WHERE in the beautiful south, Where the sweet flowers lie, Without a sing, with the sweater mouth, Under the light of the evening sky, That love never fades, though violet die!

A CHERISHED MEMORY.
EFT not a dove weep, unhon'rd be The melancholy fate affligh'd me, But those who loved me living, when die, Some fondly keen some cherish'd memory.

A GREAT COMPARATIVE LESSON.

Dr. J. H. Kellogg of Battle Creek sanatorium, in a stereoscopic lecture, pictures the decay of nations by a series of six trees dying at the top.

Bulgaria has the least dead wood, representing the fact that one person in every thousand in that country lives to pass the 100-year mark, and not a few live for half a century longer.

The United States comes next, but with only one centenarian in 25,000.

Then the record grows worse and worse: Spain 44,000, France 130,000,

England 200,000, Germany 700,000.

It is evident that the nation whose favorite drink is buttermilk stands at the head, while the nation which of all these countries is most given to beer drinking is lowest in the group.

DRINK AND DEATH RATE.

English insurance companies investigating the death rate of various classes of people, have announced that of 61,215 average people, 1,000 die annually; of 61,215 total abstainers, 560 die annually; of 61,215 liquor drinkers, 1,642 die annually, and in other words, the death rate for the three classes is as follows:

Average death rate, 16.43 to the 1,000, total abstainers, 9.27 to the 1,000, liquor drinkers, 26.82 to the 1,000. Kansas is conceded to be the driest state in the Union. The death rate there before the advent of total abstinence was 17 to the 1,000. Now it is 7.5 to the 1,000—the lowest in the world.

It is customary to promote a deputy who has given satisfaction in office. Mr. James W. Wagers has been an accommodating, polite agreeable and efficient deputy Circuit Court Clerk. adv 10-1f

The K. T. Conclave at Danville

The sixty-eighth annual conclave of the Kentucky Knights Templar formally convened at Danville Wednesday morning at the Christian church at ten o'clock.

The address of welcome was delivered by Judge J. H. Sanifer, and the response was made by Hon. Robert R. Burnam, Past Grand Master of the Masonic order in Kentucky. The exhibition parade, in which all the commanders of the State participated, took place at noon, and was witnessed by 10,000 spectators.

Shortly after noon a heavy rain began to fall, which continued until night, necessitating the postponement or suspension of all events including the competitive drill.

Numerous receptions were given the visiting Knights Wednesday evening and the conclave concluded last night with a grand ball given by Ryan Commandery, of Danville.

The number of visitors in the city during the conclave was estimated at 5,000.

The following officers were named to serve during the ensuing year:

Charles Nathan Smith, Danville, Grand Commander.

Henry Pendleton Barrett, Henderson, Deputy Grand Generalissimo.

Frederick William Harwick, Louisville, Grand Captain General.

Taylor Mitchell Estes, Lebanon, Grand Senior Warden.

Albert A. Hazlrigg, Mt. Sterling, Grand Junior Warden.

Samuel Pearce Browning, Richmond, Grand Prelate.

M. H. H. Davis, Paris, Grand Standard Bearer.

James Keely, Owensboro, Grand Sword Bearer.

Oscar Henry and Matt Miller, Louisville, Grand Wardens.

Robert Curtis Stockton, Richmond, was re-elected Grand Treasurer, and Alfred Bryant Hughes, of Covington, was re-elected Grand Recorder.

Frankfort was selected as the meeting place for the sixty-ninth annual conclave to be held the last week in next May.—Kentucky Citizen.

Those who attended from Danville were highly delighted with Danville and the courteous treatment received from the Knights of that city as well as the uniform courtesies from the citizenry.

One Hundred Dollars For Best Moonlight Schools

The Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs in their annual meeting in Lexington voted to offer a prize of $100 to the teacher in Kentucky who should teach the best moonlight school.

Prize to be awarded through the Kentucky Literacy Commission, Frankfort, Kentucky. Here is a chance for some teacher to add a hundred dollars to his salary, and for many teachers to help others and to help Kentucky. Go in and win this prize!

MISSION OF THE RURAL CHURCH

SHOULD BE UNIVERSITY OF RELIGIOUS LEARNING.

Duty of Christianity to Evangelize the World.

By Rev. Jno. A. Rice, D. D.
Pastor St. John M. E. Church, South,
St. Louis, Mo.

Some years ago, the question was asked: What is a college? The attempt to answer it shook the educational world in America from center to circumference. Another question is now beginning to be asked: What is a church? Without undertaking to give a definition of it, let me ask, in this initial paper, what the church is. The New Testament reveals three distinct tasks to which it is committed.

First, that of evangelization. The church is divinely commissioned to reach for the lowest and the least man in the least land and offer him sonship to the Eternal God; offer him a divine power, which lifts him out of the hog and places him upon the highest levels of human life, where God and the soul are in fellowship. This alone is an immense privilege.

Teaching the Art of Living.

The church is commissioned also to teach and train those who are rich with its evangelistic message.

The term Religious Education comes to mean a specific thing in our country, namely, the training of the people in the local church in those deep matters which pertain to the art of living. I am not now speaking of the work of education in schools, colleges and universities, but the work of education at our doors, in the congregation. Every agency in reach should be employed to the utmost in this important mission. Indeed, the local church could be made a sort of university for all the people, in which the simple, practical arts and virtues of everyday life should be taught and enforced. Only recently has this special phase of the church's work received anything like adequate attention. The New Testament word for it is Education.

School of Religion Needed.

Of course, the Sunday School is the center for all this work, although the activities of the church should extend through the entire week and the Sunday School should cease to be so named. It should be called the School of Religion or the Church School or something else that indicates it to be an all-the-week activity. During this time various and sundry clubs, classes, musical organizations, culture courses, as well as distinctly religious meetings, should be held. Thickly settled neighborhoods, as we shall see, offer fine opportunities for the development of things spiritual.

The third task to which the church is committed is that of Christianizing the social order, that of infusing the spirit of Jesus into every nook and corner of our life. Nothing is foreign to the interest of the church.
